They received a notice from the current property managers telling them they must get rid of the dog or face eviction. In June of 2015, the Complainants submitted a request for a reasonable accommodation explaining the need for the service animal. The Respondents failed to respond to their request. In August of 2015, the complainants made a second request for a handicap parking space due to both of their disabilities. Respondent Dill immediately denied that request. On August 27, 2015, the Complainants received a non-renewal of lease notice. The Complainants believe they received the notice because of their requests for accommodations due to their disability.

The complainants believe the respondents collective discriminated against them by refusing to grant a reasonable accommodation because of their disabilities in violation of the Act.
